CCA: Centre for Contemporary Arts

It's a summer of many delights at CCA. The 'Borrowed Time' exhibition with Karen Kramer and Alice May Williams continues into July. Then we have a new solo show, Television, by Kathryn Elkin which includes three new works – you shouldn't miss this!

There's also a very strong line-up of artists in Intermedia and the Creative Lab including Aaron McCarthy, Michael Kent, Amy Pickles & Sally Hackett, Sora Park, Enoch Cheng and Carrie Skinner.

While public engagement projects such as Cooking Pot also continue over the summer, another new strand of talks and projects will be introduced under the title Intentions into Action: First Stop. Events by Michael Rakowitz and Basurama will kick this off, leading gradually to an exhibition in 2017.

Likewise a new series of talks and screenings on cities will preface a major exhibition on the subject next year. Comic Con also returns in July, this time spread over CCA and the Royal Concert Hall.

Musically (and spiritually) two musical events stand out. The Gyuto Monks of Tibet come to our building, directly from their performance at Glastonbury Festival. It's hard not to sense echoes of Sri Chinmoy's influence on the Third Eye Centre here in the 1970s. There is at least a monastic reference in the other musical highlight of the summer at CCA; The anchoress, one of the most interesting contemporary song writers around, will showcase songs from her new album, Confessions of a Romance Novelist.

Several great screenings by Digital Desperados are also spread through the season's programme and a GLITCH party follows a Cheryl Dunye film on 27 August. Other intriguing and exciting events to watch out for include the launch of Matchbox Cineclub, devoted to cult cinema, and a symposium to help establish the Radical Renewable Art + Activism Fund.

Did I mention Christeene, presented by Buzzcut? I should have.

JERWOOD / FVU AWARDS 2016:

‘BORROWED TIME’

KAREN KRAMER / ALICE MAY WILLIAMS

Until Sun 10 July

Tue–Sat: 11am–6pm // Sun: 12noon–6pm // Free

The Jerwood/FVU Awards 2016 exhibition ‘Borrowed Time’ showcases two moving-image works by selected artists Karen Kramer and Alice May Williams. These significant new films have been developed following the award of £20,000 to each artist last year from Jerwood Charitable Foundation and FVU. The works debuted at Jerwood Space, London from 9 March to 24 April 2016.

The artists’ works respond in different ways to the theme of ‘Borrowed Time’, with its allusion to escalating levels of personal and national debt and a wider feeling of economic unease or ecological threat caused by our exploitation of natural resources and the impact it has on the environment. The more we look to keep ourselves afloat in the present by deferring the costs to the future, the more we are reminded of how unsustainable this is. Both artists focus their explorations of the theme on the legacy of power stations. While Williams spotlights the speculative urban development that is taking place in and around London’s Battersea Power Station, Kramer considers the landscape around the Fukushima nuclear reactor as a symbol of man’s complex interaction with the natural world. FVU worked closely with the artists, overseeing the development of the films over the ten month production period.

The two winning artists were selected from a record number of applications by a panel comprising: Steven Bode, Director of Film and Video Umbrella; Shonagh Manson, Director of Jerwood Charitable Foundation; Francis McKee, Director of CCA, Glasgow; Marianna Simnett, winner of the Jerwood/FVU Awards 2015; and Sam Thorne, Director of Nottingham Contemporary.

The Jerwood/FVU Awards are a collaboration between Jerwood Charitable Foundation and FVU, in association with CCA, Glasgow and University of East London. With additional support from The Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation. FVU is supported by Arts Council England.

TELEVISION

KATHRYN ELKIN

Sat 23 July – Sun 4 September

Tue-Sat: 11am-6pm // Sun: 12noon-6pm // Free // Preview: Fri 22 July, 7pm-9pm

As part of her solo show, Kathryn Elkin presents three new works alongside a small overview of some of her recent films. Documentary interviews, proto pop videos and talk shows are reworked into new and less stable forms to find out what constitutes the 'televisual'.

'I probably told you I don't know how to play, right?' is a quote from the new video entitled 'Film, 2016' on Edinburgh piano tuner Ben Treuhaft. As a witness, Elkin talks with Treuhaft about his youth and his dreams for the future. Stepping away from transcription and re-embodied performances as method, the role Elkin prescribes for Ben is that of his profession.

Elkin: 'Ok - so it starts off - it's just a list of names. So you listen and repeat after me, ok?'
McKeown: 'Right, ok.'

In 'Why La Bamba', an existing work, the musician John McKeown is fed lines by Elkin on-set from a Dustin Hoffman interview from 1975. In 'Dame, 2' an interview with Helen Mirren from the same year is performed as a song by Elkin, backed by a choir of associates and friends she corrals into chanting in loose harmony.

In many of Elkin's works she channels encounters with charismatic subjects, negotiated live to camera. The subject at hand is asked to embody another subject with particular cultural status, through re-performing speech. Behaviours 'on set' are mobilised to interrogate cultural gender norms. Theme tunes and soundtracks are weaved through but also headline many of the works, describing and embellishing the subjects in new ways. Elkin's enquiry does not simply look backwards or forwards, but rather beyond and through in an age where television, as a form of 'looking' as well as a medium, might have a ghostly quality.

Events:

Sat 23 Jul, 3pm: Artist Tour with Kathryn Elkin

Fri 26 Aug, 7pm: An evening with Kathryn Elkin brings together invited guests to map out 'televisual' properties within artist and experimental film, with a particular focus on female filmmakers. With Irene Revel.

A new e-publication will be produced capturing responses on the works, a short reflection on television as a medium and a speculation on future research.

NEW PYRE

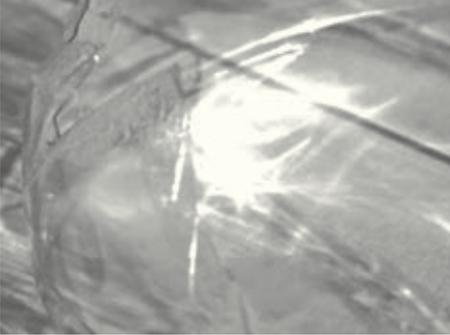

Sat 16 Jul - Fri 5 Aug

Tue-Sat: 11am-6pm // Sun: 12noon-6pm // Preview: Fri 15 July, 7pm-9pm // Free

Late evening opening: Fri 22 July, 7pm-9pm

The space will host a complex of dialectic works, creating a site of tension between sculpture, moving image and language; seeking forms of production through deconstruction. A body of work surrounding an investigation into the infrastructural role of language in belief, thought and place-making. Deconstructing forms of identity, an object's past and future; creating a new place of tension and fragmentation.

SHAVED FADES & BAMBOO GRAFFITI

Sat 20 – Wed 31 Aug

Tue-Sat: 11am-6pm // Sun: 12noon-6pm // Preview: Fri 19 Aug, 7pm-9pm // Free

'What am I doing in writing to you? trying to photograph perfume.'
Clarice Lispector, Agua Viva.

Shaved Fades & Bamboo Graffiti presents a series of experiments and works in progress. Predominantly using drawing and moving image to consider aridity as a starting point while approaching the exhibition as an oscillation between potential and limitation.

VOICING THE ARCHIVE

Until Sun 31 Jul

Mon-Thu: 10am-12midnight // Fri-Sat: 10am-1am // Sun: 12noon-12midnight // Free // All ages

As part of its ongoing Footnoting the Archive project and in partnership with the public engagement programme at CCA, MAP presents a series of audio recordings of past MAP contributions, voiced by their authors and installed at a listening station in the CCA foyer and Edinburgh Sculpture Workshop.

Eleven years of MAP content is now freely available online. Footnoting the Archive aims to present the MAP archive as an accessible and active resource. This series of audio recordings presents MAP content in a different context, allowing the possibility to reach and engage with new audiences. Through this particular strand of programming, MAP guest editors Suzanne van der Lingen and Claire Walsh worked with CCA's Public Engagement Curator, Viviana Checchia, to provide access to elements of its archive for visually impaired visitors at CCA and Edinburgh Sculpture Workshop.

Visitors using the tables and seating in the foyer have the option of listening to the MAP recordings and browsing a collection of MAP magazines.

INTENTIONS IN ACTION: FIRST STOP

In April 2016, Social Intentions - a symposium about the use of social engagement within art institutions – was delivered as part of CCA’s public engagement programme. We are now preparing for an exhibition project about the uses of art and its participation in society in connection with the many interesting questions and ideas expressed in the symposium. A series of talks, workshops and presentations will be held in the lead up to the exhibition in 2017. In July and August the series will explore the idea of reuse as a way to create.

CITIES

Throughout July & August
cca-glasgow.com

Throughout July and August, CCA will be facilitating a series of talks, screenings and events surrounding the idea of the city.

Acting as primers for an upcoming exhibition programme in April 2017, this summer discussion will explore how people mobilise themselves within the constraint of – and in response to – the city. Focusing on the catalytic potential of the city, we'll examine what can emerge from different approaches to the civic and urban space, looking at how space is controlled through different forms. Exploring modes of civil obedience and self-organisation, we'll also discuss how subcultures emerge from the city, how space becomes gentrified, and radical modes of architecture and planning.

Alongside local stories and a weekly reading group, we'll screen films surrounding the occupation of structures like Torre David, Caracas' famous unfinished skyscraper and discuss political engineers such as Bogota's former mayor Antanas Mockus, and his use of artistic strategies to effect societal change.

CCA: ACCESS

CCA's programme embraces a broad community of artists, organisations and audiences. We continue to work with an open source approach to programming, where proposals from across all communities are welcomed and supported with a collaborative approach to resources. Access for audiences is a priority, keeping prices low or offering events for free, with a focus on events that give audiences the opportunity to engage actively with artists and with a programme that connects a broad range of issues. We are now working to deepen our engagement with audiences and communities, and support universal access to the arts.

We're aware that we can't rely on the good work of our programme partners to fulfil a quota of accessible approaches, but we're lucky to work with many partners who are explicitly focused on inclusion; we learn a lot from how other organisations structure their work and how they prioritise accessibility. Long-time open-source collaborators Independence – an inclusive dance company providing creative movement/dance classes, training and performance opportunities for people with learning disabilities, their carers and volunteers – host weekly classes our theatre space. Their innovative approach has developed from its own creative process, providing an environment which is safe and appropriate for the needs of all participants.

Another organisation leading on equalities is SQIFF (Scottish Queer International Film Festival), who prioritise accessibility and diversity within their programme, providing BSL interpretation, English subtitles and, for this year's festival, audio description. They also ask venues to provide gender neutral toilets, and ask all staff and volunteers working on the festival to be aware of acknowledging and respecting difference amongst audiences to make sure every visitor is comfortable and has a good experience.

Our friends and Cultural Tenants Paragon Music use music to improve people's lives, increasing access to opportunities to create and perform new music, and engaging with related disciplines such as dance, drama and visual art. Through inclusive workshops and performances, they generate learning and social opportunities for people of all ages and from a wide variety of groups in the community, including people with additional support needs. We always look up to Paragon as examples of best working practice and learn a huge amount from how they work.

The Scottish Mental Health and Arts Film Festival regularly programme events at CCA which challenge preconceived ideas about mental health, including their new festival Declaration which explores health and human rights. Other events happening at CCA throughout the year include Africa in Motion, who organise screenings focused on African stories and host industry professionals from the continent, and we also collaborate frequently with the brilliant GRAMNet– Glasgow Refugee, Asylum and Migrant Network, who bring together researchers, policy makers and practitioners working with migrants, asylum seekers and refugees in the UK.

Despite working with many brilliant partners, the diversity of our core programme and its audience is something that will always require attention. Through our public engagement programme, we aim to widen and deepen our connection with the public and specifically with community groups that we have previously failed to reach. In addition to specific projects, CCA wants to build a programme that generates a continuous dialogue with audiences around our open source policy: how to extend that idea and understand what more access to the building and programme could mean; how this model could be exported to other organisations or places; and what we can learn from other models ourselves. It's important that we think and debate current social issues and bring them in to the programme too.

As well as acting through exhibitions and events, we have also conducted significant access improvement work in the building itself over the past two years. In the spring of 2015, CCA was part of the accessible tourism pilot project in Glasgow, which was led by VisitScotland and Euan's Guide. This resulted in the development of an extensive access statement for CCA which is available on our website, and from our box office as a large print version. All of our front of house staff have completed Visit Scotland's access training, and we are working on building improvements including access loops, clearer signage and improved movement throughout our spaces. In March 2016, CCA took part in Disabled Access Day, a nationwide event which encourages disabled visitors to try something new and for venues to be more aware of the specific requirements of audiences. Our work in this area is ongoing and we welcome any feedback or suggestions on how we can improve and develop.

Our future vision centres on continuing to widen this access and making people aware of the resources and support that we can offer, as well as considering what new programming or activity we could put in place to encourage visitors from different backgrounds. We are committed to access as an organisation, both for audiences and in encouraging people from all backgrounds to join our staff and board. This challenge will be ongoing, but through the good work of our partners and the development of our own programme, hopefully we can make more people aware that we are a cultural hub for all kinds of people and practices, and that we are open to everyone.
